

ANGRY COOK STABS WIFE OF DOCTOR, SETS HOUSE AFIRE

Japanese, Rebuked by Philadelphia Woman, Attacks Her With Ice Pick.

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—Mrs. Lewis Brinton, wife of Dr. Brinton, one of the city's most noted physicians, was stabbed with an ice pick late yesterday in her summer home of Rosemont, by Tetsuzi Sakurai, a Japanese cook.

The Japanese, after stabbing Mrs. Brinton, fought off Miss Elizabeth Brinton, eighteen, her daughter; stabbed the butler, John Milligan, and ran to his room on the third floor, where he attempted to set the house on fire.

The timely arrival of Radnor Township police saved the house from destruction. Mrs. Brinton is in the Bryn Mawr Hospital. Her condition is serious, but it is expected she will recover.

The stabbing, according to Mrs. Brinton, was the outgrowth of a dispute over the wearing of a white coat. When the Japanese became offensive, Mrs. Brinton sent for the police. He was warned and seemed to be quieted.

Yesterday when Mrs. Brinton went to the kitchen to give orders the dispute flamed out anew. The man seemed to cherish a grudge.

As Mrs. Brinton told the story later in the hospital, she found the man working in his shirt sleeves. She told him again he must wear his coat, and, in a rage, he sprang at her, grabbed her by the throat and dragged her through the butler's pantry into the living room. In the pantry he picked up an ice pick and, while she struggled, stabbed her repeatedly.

Miss Brinton heard her mother scream for help, and ran to the living room. The girl saw her mother bleeding from many wounds.

"This is what you get for sending for police," he repeated. The girl seized the man's wrist with both her hands. He shook her off, and Miss Brinton went to the telephone and called the police station.

Sgt. Clemons, who had subdued the Japanese the day before, went to the house with Patrolmen Hatch and Smith. Meanwhile, the butler, Milligan, heard the screams, and attacked the Japanese. The cook, after twice stabbing Milligan, broke away from the butler's grip a moment before the police arrived, and ran up the back stairs.

After setting fire to a mattress in his room, the cook hid in a closet, where he was found and subdued. The policemen turned their attention to the fire, and had it in check when firemen reached the house.

FIND GEMS IN THEATRE RUIN.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Workmen clearing away the debris of the Knickerbocker Theatre, which caved in under a heavy snowfall last winter, killing nearly 100 persons, have found various pieces of valuable jewelry.

To-day they dug out a finger ring with a cluster of ten diamonds. A large turquoise ring, found about the same time, was marked slightly by a scratch down the middle. Several pairs of eyeglasses, a gold knife and chain and other things of less value were uncovered.
